Myra Christensen is an author of children's picture books. Her recently released book, "Chloe Finds a Friend" is the third story in a series of books that is planned for the newly created Farm Grandma Tales enterprise. The title Farm Grandma was given to Myra by her grandchildren. For twenty-five years she lived on a small farm in Oregon. Myra loves writing stories for children about the cows, goats, miniature horses, and other animals she and her husband have raised.

Myra began writing her Farm Grandma Tales stories after a number of memorable experiences with the animals on the farm. Her first book comes from the story she wrote after waking one day to see the bull Uproar out in the orchard using his horns to grapple with the fruit trees. She initially wrote the story for adults with the title "Don't Let the Bull Prune the Orchard." She realized that she had experienced on the farm many such stories that with a touch of whimsy would enthrall children. She published that story as her first children's book, titled "Uproar the Helpful Bull."

The Farm Grandma Tales book series is working to release two books a year for the enjoyment of young readers. A list of book titles with summaries, videos, and links to retail stores can be found at Myra's website at FarmGrandmaTales.com.

Myra's interests are music, gardening, cooking, and traveling in her RV to beautiful parks in America. She enjoys playing the cello, biking, hiking, exploring, and being in the great outdoors.
