book: Chloe Finds a Friend

Publish Date: October 6, 2025

Author: Myra Christensen

Illustrator: Patricia Lee Christensen

Caring older animals make a plan to overcome division and sadness in the cow herd.

“Chloe Finds a Friend” is the third story in the series of books that is planned for the newly created Farm Grandma Tales enterprise. The author Myra Christensen uses as a source of inspiration her actual experiences with raising animals on her farm. The young reader will be captivated with tales of talking animals who face challenges with humor and heart. Myra has spent many years in the wonderful world of children having raised five children who are all raising grandchildren who call her Farm Grandma.

For this book the author uses a story from the barnyard to explore the themes of being sensitive to feelings of others and how reaching to others outside ones usual circle of acquaintances can lead to finding new friends. The book takes an actual experience from the farm and weaves into a tale of talking animals that naturally ends up showing lessons of life to children.

The story opens by showing how Tess the horse, the oldest and wisest of the farm animals, is always looking to help the other animals. One day she comes across Chloe the cow who is sad because the other cows shun her and ignore her. Tess works with one of the older cows to come up with a plan to help foster unity and closeness within the herd. The book ends as the plan is put into action and changes begin to occur within the cow herd. The illustrations in the book continue the tradition of bright and beautiful scenery with engaging animal characters.

The Farm Grandma Tales book series is working to continue regular releases of new stories involving the animals from Farm Grandma’s farm.

A list of book titles with summaries, videos, and links to retail stores can be found at Myra's website at FarmGrandmaTales.com. A media kit with general information and a kit for each book are also found on the Press page of the website.
